BOOK SYNOPSIS

All Matthew Yazee wants when he walks into the Whitehorse, Stevens, and Whitehorse law offices in Farmington, NM is for his employer, EnviroGuard Recovery Services, to cover his medical bills. That's only fair, he thinks, since it was the stuff in their barrels that made him sick in the first place. Unknown to Matthew, he has stumbled across the most dangerous eco-terrorism conspiracy the world has ever faced, run by terrorists who will stop at nothing to see their diabolical scheme succeed. As Chaco Whitehorse begins the Yazee investigation, from out of nowhere, he receives the most startling news a man can receive--news that opens a window into his long-forgotten past, and which drives the final nail into his failing relationship with longtime girlfriend, Kathy Redhand. As Chaco struggles with his new realities, the Yazee case requires him to place his life on the line at the very moment when others need him most. But the alternative is unspeakable--risking up to a million lives and the possibility of bringing the American economy to its knees.
